

ABSTRACT

A rotary engine comprising a stator and a rotor, in which the stator presents a chamber the surface of which presents circular symmetry about a stator axis and the rotary presents an axis of rotation eccentric to the stator axis and is formed from a body which is torsionally rigid with an output shaft, and of which the envelope presents circular symmetry about the axis of rotation, said envelope being similar to the stator chamber.